One more item:

Please see if EVERYTHING that were on the hard drives I sent to you because I thought they were the original drives, is on these hard drives - because he could also possibly be withholding drives.

If he claimed that I gave him my computer - then He should have everything that was on those hard drives. Otherwise, his copies are clones and he didn't copy everything.

In anticipation of having the devices photographed that we took custody of on Friday, I wanted to share the following chat of these items with you:

Make/Manufacturer	Capacity	Serial No.
G-Drive	2 TB	YAGUKLDS
G-Drive	2 TB	YAHE1HWT
Samsung 2.5" Solid State Drive	256 GB	YC3GG0G936-SY936B4846
Intel 2.5" Solid State Drive	80 G	CVEM845200U2080DGN
Hitachi Deskstar 3.5" Hard Drive	750 GB	IX75100DFYKGA

The Intel 80G hard drive has a note on it that it is damaged, which is not recognized by any of our hardware. In light of this, this device will need to be sent to a clean room for repair, which I can help facilitate, so that the data contained on this device can be acquired.

Additionally, the Samsung 256GB has core storage and is encrypted with FileVault. Do you have the password for this hard drive?

Talk to you soon.
